

Overview

The Black Vox External Mic audio recorder is the extended microphone version of the BVIM audio recorder, produced in the UK and originally built for the Metropolitan police and used by over 500 Professionals in the Investigation industry since launch in 2017.

Built for long term deployments in difficult recording situations, the external mic is particularly useful in large vehicles, such as haulage trucks.

The noisy mechanisms inside larger vehicles were the main reason for the External version, being able to thread the microphone behind the driver or front passenger seats for a better vantage point, using the 100 cm flexible external Microphone, ensures crystal clear audio capture in this difficult recording environment

Placement of the BVEXT can be discreetly positioned under a desk on a metal surface, securely attaching the device to any metal surface, the same placement can be achieved in a vehicle by attaching the BVEXT to the metal underside of driver or passenger seats inside a vehicle.
